Description

Lorenzo Vitagliano forge his path as a designer in Florence, at the historical product design institute ISIA Firenze, where he graduates with a speculative thesis on new scenarios about vertical farming and self-production. In 2020, moves to the Netherlands to attend the Design Academy in Eindhoven, delving into a design method based on a research approach. He is currently based in Trieste, from where he practices as an interdisciplinary freelancer around Europe, passionately navigating from pure industrial product design to artistic installations and Curatorship.
